I explained to the Ambassador the U.S. proposal with respect to an OAS meeting on Guatemala.

He said that he felt that the plan was a good one; that he would communicate with his government, but that he felt reasonably certain that Cuba would support us. He liked the idea of holding the meeting in Montevideo and of the United States proposing that the meeting be held.

I said that I would forward to him the documentation that we were preparing in the way of evidence and asked that he comment on how it might be improved or amplified. He readily agreed to do so.
